

Best “At Home” Steak

1. Preheat your oven to 325 F.

Rub steak with olive oil; coat with a salt-and-pepper seasoning mix*. Ms. Anderson adds a small amount of sugar to her mixture to speed up browning.

2. Sear in hot skillet for 2 minutes per side until you have "an impressive crust."

Rest seared steaks on wire rack over shallow baking pan. (Chef Richard Chamberlain puts his on a sheet pan.)

Baste seared steak with a garlic-infused, extra-virgin olive oil. Place baking pan with rack of steaks in oven.

3. Finish steaks in 325 F oven for up to 25-30 minutes "to reach a rosy pink medium."

Steaks are done "when an instant-read thermometer, plunged deep into the steak from the side, registers 140 degrees, but it will not hurt steaks, especially filets, to cook to an even higher internal temperature." Ms. Anderson says, "If they're ready, but you're not, simply turn off the oven and crack the door. That'll buy you at least another 10 minutes."

Five-pepper seasoning blend: Mix 3 tablespoons coarsely ground mixed peppercorns (black, white, green and pink) with 2 teaspoons kosher salt and 1/8 teaspoon ground red pepper. Use 2 teaspoons of the mixture for the steak sauce. Use the rest to season steaks.

Experts generally agree that these four cuts are the best choices when you're looking to impress or indulge. Chef Richard Chamberlain notes that a bone-in steak cooks more slowly, but the bone adds flavor to leaner cuts.

T-BONE is cut from the center of the short loin.

PORTERHOUSE includes the tip of the tenderloin (where the filet mignon comes from).

BONELESS NEW YORK STRIP is also known as a Kansas City Steak. It's cut from the strip loin.

RIB-EYE is also known as a Delmonico, and is often served bone-in.
